

Print.

December 8-14, 2016

2

Welcome
Tribune-Review
readers

3

Whatever happened to Born Free?

6

Phipps goes green

SLICK SHAVINGS: It's incredible how easily a chainsaw can cut through a block of ice. Dean Tozzi, of Ice Creation, mesmerized the crowd at Light Up Point Breeze on Saturday, Dec. 3. Tozzi has been creating ice sculptures for 16 years. At Light Up Point Breeze, he turned a block of ice into a reindeer.

Pierina Morelli for Print

COVERAGE ON PAGE 8.

Lead in the water

Residents concerned about water
still worried after PWSA meeting

Point Breeze, Bright and Shiny!

Photos by Pierina Morelli for Print

With temperatures in the low 40s Saturday, Dec. 3, the weather was perfect for Light Up Point Breeze.

Neighbors came bundled up, many in holiday wear and festive hats to enjoy the fun activities on Reynolds Street.

An ice demonstration by Ice Creations mesmerized the crowd as sculpture Dean Tozzi carved a reindeer out of a block of ice.

Throughout the evening, activities included making ornaments at Hatch Art Studio, getting pet pictures with Santa Paws and live music as The Three Rivers Bell Ringers rang in the holiday spirit.

What had previously been a big block of ice was rendered a reindeer by Dean Tozzi, of Ice Creations, at Light Up Point Breeze on Saturday, Dec. 3.

The Hutchinson family from Squirrel Hill pulled out their seasonal ware for Light Up Point Breeze. In the back row, Nicholas is held by his mom, Lisa, who is next to her husband, Brian. In front of them Jackie, left, and Mary are rocking their reindeer hats..

Point Breeze residents Jon and Micah Arnold enjoyed the festivities, as Micah sported her one-eyed monster hat. Their 8-month-old son, Hadassh Max, was wearing a blue bear hat.

The ice sculpting drew the biggest crowd of the night as Point Breeze residents were fascinated watching Dean Tozzi carve a block of ice with a chainsaw. Theresa Uber, left, held her grandson Sanfrid Odhner as her daughter Eden Odhner-McQueen held her daughter, Willow Odhner.

Elliott Miller, left, with Lila Whartnaby, both from Point Breeze, made ornaments at Hatch Art Studio, which offered creative activities for everyone.

What had previously been a big block of ice was rendered a reindeer by Dean Tozzi, of Ice Creations, at Light Up Point Breeze on Saturday, Dec. 3.

holiday wear and festive hats to enjoy the fun activities on Reynolds Street.

An ice demonstration by Ice Creations mesmerized the crowd as sculpture Dean Tozzi carved a reindeer out of a block of ice.

Throughout the evening, activities included making ornaments at Hatch Art Studio, getting pet pictures with Santa Paws and live music as The Three Rivers Bell Ringers rang in the holiday spirit.

The Hutchinson family from Squirrel Hill pulled out their seasonal ware for Light Up Point Breeze. In the back row, Nicholas is held by his mom, Lisa, who is next to her husband, Brian. In front of them Jackie, left, and Mary are rocking their reindeer hats.

Point Breeze residents Jon and Micah Arnold enjoyed the festivities, as Micah sported her one-eyed monster hat. Their 8-month-old son, Hadassh Max, was wearing a blue bear hat.

The ice sculpting drew the biggest crowd of the night as Point Breeze residents were fascinated watching Dean Tozzi carve a block of ice with a chainsaw. Theresa Uber, left, held her grandson Sanfrid Odhner as her daughter Eden Odhner-McQueen held her daughter, Willow Odhner.

Elliott Miller, left, with Lila Whartnaby, both from Point Breeze, made ornaments at Hatch Art Studio, which offered creative activities for everyone.

Light Up Point Breeze on Reynolds Street drew a sizable crowd Saturday night, Dec. 3. Reynolds Street was closed between Hastings and Gettysburg streets from 4 to 8 p.m.